Research has established only that N. Collins and George Burnett were nineteenth century owners of the land upon which the residence at 7066 Lobdell was built; who built the home and what historical associations the Greek Revival residence might have remain unknown. The building is most significant for its architecture, however. While it is similar to other sites in Argentine Township in that it is representative of early midwestern Greek Revival architecture, its unique design qualities and fine craftsmanship make it outstanding.

The frame structure conforms to an L-shaped plan. The facade is highlighted by a fully pedimented gable, a wide frieze, and nicely detailed corner pilasters. While other vernacular Greek Revival examples exhibit entrances in the two-story upright portion of the structure, this residence contains two doors within the recessed porch constructed in the ell or wing of the structure. The structure retains its architectural integrity and testifies to the early settlement of this portion of Genesee County.

Though he is uncertain as to the date he completed this structure, Erwin Gabel, retired farmer, built this unusual round barn in the early decades of the twentieth century. He used cement block, lumber from his property, and help from local 4-H members in its construction. The structure exhibits numerous doors and windows around its circumference. It is capped by an elaborately trussed roof with two pitches and a projecting gable dormer. The agricultural structure achieves significance as an unusual example of barn construction; only a dozen octagonal and round barns have been documented in Michigan to date. The residence and four additional outbuildings associated with the barn date from the 1920s and 1930s and are not of architectural or historical significance.

Reviewer's comments:

week #8 - based on unusual character, which usually does not alone justify eligibility to the NR. However the significance of the round barn as a type in America is well ~~documented~~ recognized, and this is one of only a handful in the state. apparently
