Summary

The amendment to the Hale Avenue Historic District contains portions of two blocks adjacent to the current district on the west and east. The area included in the proposed boundary increase contains a total of 10 structures, of which eight are historically significant to the development of the downtown business district and contemporary with the period of significance, 1901-1936, of the original Hale Avenue Historic District.

Elaboration

The amendment to the existing Hale Avenue Historic District (listed on the National Register of Historic Places 09-14-87) is composed of portions of two blocks adjacent on the west and east of the current district. The area in the amendment contains a total of ten structures, eight of which are historic and contribute to the significance of the district. Two structures, 302 W. Hale and 306 W. Hale, were determined non-contributing due to the remodeled brickwork in the 1980s.

Eastern Boundary Addition

The following three buildings are located in the first block of Hale Avenue, just west of the railroad tracks. Visually, these structures appear as one large building on the exterior, with the brick parapet running the length and with separate entries. On the interior, the spaces are separated by fire walls, which serve as common walls with the adjoining structure.

The 1908 Sanborn map (the earliest city map), shows two one-story brick buildings on the southeast corner of Hale and Popular Streets. The 1913 Sanborn map shows four structures on this block. The four structures, going from the railroad to the corner of Popular to the west, are listed as: a tailor store; a meat grocery and harness store (these two are separated by a framed partition); a harness/hardware store; and a store for farm implements. The tailor store was destroyed at an unknown date, and is now an empty lot. The remaining buildings are typical of the late nineteenth and early twentieth century commercial structures in location, size, scale, and massing. The buildings complemented the growing business district of Osceola, especially once the county courthouse was constructed in 1919 in the next block, across the street.

107 West Hale Avenue (MS0257)

The structure at 107 W. Hale is called the Adolf Wineburge building. It is a one-story, rectangular, brick structure on a continuous foundation with a flat roof and a brick parapet. The brick parapet is corbelled as well. The centered entry is recessed with flanking display windows.

109 West Hale Avenue (MS0159)

The 109 W. Hale structure, known as the Eli Saphin Building, is due west of the above-mentioned, and was constructed circa 1910. It is separated from the previously listed by a fire wall. It is typical of commercial buildings at the turn of the century, being one-story, rectangular, brick structure on a continuous foundation with a parapet wall along the flat roof. The brick parapet is corbelled with dentil work along the top. Cast iron columns complement the front facade, flanking the door. The centered entry has flanking display windows on each side; there are fixed paned, transom windows the width of the structure.

111 West Hale Avenue (MS0160)

The 111 W. Hale building, on the southeast corner of Hale and Poplar, is called the LK Herwarg Building and was constructed circa 1910. The 1908 Sanborn Insurance map indicates such a building on this corner. It is a one-story, rectangular, brick structure on a continuous foundation with a flat roof and a brick parapet. It is typical of commercial buildings at the turn of the century with a centered, inset or recessed, front door with flanking display windows.

Western Boundary Addition

The structures located in the 100 block of Walnut and the 300 block of Hale are the architectural foundation of the northwest corner of Walnut and Hale streets. They are a major aspect of the town's commercial area and are across the street from the county courthouse.

The five structures facing Walnut Street appear as one long, one-story structure with a brick parapet spanning the entire length of the buildings, with asymmetrical placement of a decorative parapet massing on the second and fourth bays. The pediments are different in style but not in height. There is a brick parapet wall along the front and side facades. These five structures were constructed circa 1905 by Eatmon construction Company, with William Frank Little as the architect. A unique architectural feature of these individual structures is that each entry is recessed with fixed transoms over the display windows and the entry. In the latter case, with all entries, the fixed transoms are located on the structure's exterior facade (building line), creating a protective entrance feature; there is a fixed transom over the recessed entry as well. Under all the display windows are raised wooden panels. The entire length of this exterior facade was remodeled in the 1980s. The remodeling included bricks cleaned, new entrances, some windows and doors altered, etc. Also, awnings were placed over the display windows.

The 1919 Sanborn listed these structures as a grocery store, an office, a barber shop, a restaurant, a bottling works company, and an auto repair shop. This structural unit has one interior, fire-rated wall, with the other walls being framed partitions that separate the independent stores listed in the 1919 map.

101 North Walnut (MS0134)

The building at 101 N. Walnut is historically known as the Cramer's Café. This structure is the corner unit on the northwest corner of Walnut and Hale streets. It is rectangular in shape, of brick construction with a recessed front door.

103 North Walnut (MS0251)

At 103 N. Walnut, the historic name is Joy Theatre. The centered front entry is recessed with flanking, display windows. This structure has the prominent, stepped brick parapet wall with decorative brick detailing.

105 North Walnut (MS0252)

The structure at 105 N. Walnut is historically called the Courthouse Café, and in the 1919 Sanborn, a restaurant was listed at this site. The entry is similar to its southern counterpart (103 N. Walnut), but there is no decorative pedimented parapet; its lines are straight with a raised brick banding above the vents.

107 North Walnut (MS0253)

At 107 N. Walnut, the structure's historical name is the Young Insurance Agency. This structure has a pediment, which is stepped and centered between the last two bays. The pediment is simple with a brick banding along the facade. The fixed transoms have been altered to not allow light; also, it does not have awnings over the display windows.

109 North Walnut (MS0254)

The structure at 109 N. Walnut is historically known as Dr. Turentine's Office and is the last bay of this overall facade. The exterior facade maintains the same rhythm, pattern and massing as its predecessors. It is a simplified ending to an overall architectural gem.

302 West Hale, rear side of 101 North Walnut (MS0255)

The structure at 302 W. Hale is located on the northwest corner of Walnut and Hale, and is the historical rear side of 101 N. Walnut, known as Cramer's Café. On the 1919 Sanborn, this structure does have an address, but no business is listed. There are four windows along this façade, counting the corner display window, two windows, an entrance and another window. The entrance is recessed with a single display window on the left; there is paneled wood trim below the window and framing the entrance. As with the structures facing Walnut, there is a fixed transom at the street level as well as at the door level. This structure is non-contributing due to the remodeling in the 1980s.

306 West Hale (MS0256)

The structure at 306 W. Hale was added after the ca. 1905 construction. There are double display windows on the south elevation and two windows on the west elevation, along the alley. The main entry on the south elevation has a recessed entrance with flanking display windows. This area appears to have been altered dramatically with an exaggerated entrance on the facade at the western-most end of the structure, by the alley, making it non-contributing.

Summary

The original nomination of the Hale Avenue Historic District in Osceola, Arkansas (listed on the National Register of Historic Places 09/14/87) recognizes an ensemble of historic buildings constructed during the period 1901 to 1936. This amendment seeks to add two areas adjacent to the eastern and western edges of the district containing a total of ten structures. Of these ten structures, eight contribute to the significance of the historic district. The areas contained in the amendment represent the same development and commercial growth patterns historically important to the Hale Avenue Historic District.

Elaboration

The amendment to the existing Hale Avenue Historic District (listed on the National Register of Historic Places 09-14-87) is composed of portions of two blocks adjacent on the West and East of the current district. The area in the amendment contains a total of ten structures, eight of which are historic and contribute to the significance of the district. Two structures, 302 W. Hale and 306 W. Hale, were determined non-contributing due to the remodeled brickwork in the 1980s.

The 100 block of West Hale is the primary focus of the town's development along the railroad and contains significant structures, constructed circa 1910, which are identified with small town development during this time period. These three structures (107, 109 and 111 W. Hale) are located in the first block off the railroad tracks and are across the street from a hotel and catty-corner from the courthouse. The structures are representative of vernacular commercial buildings and provided a wide range of services. Also, the structures have provided the town with a focal point for businesses well into the 21st century.

The 300 block of West Hale (302 and 306) and the 100 block of Walnut (101, 103, 105, 107 and 109) serve as anchors to an important part of Osceola's downtown historic district in that they are located on the northwest corner of Hale and Walnut, due west of the courthouse and have been a vital aspect of the town's architectural heritage. This may be represented by the fact that these structures were remodeled in the 1980s and continue to serve the town. These two structures are considered non-contributing due to the brick remodeling.

These seven structures, in close proximity to the Hale Avenue Historic District, are a reminder of the value of a delta town, which served as the county center for government and business. Their architectural statement is an endorsement. These seven structures were constructed circa 1900 by Eatmon Construction Company. The architect is listed as William Frank Little, 1825-1925, who moved to the area after the Civil War. Although Little lived near Osceola for several years, he later moved to Jonesboro. It is not documented that he was an architect, but he was a businessman in Jonesboro. These structures, altogether, provide an interesting perspective of the importance of rhythm, pattern, massing and continuity on a street. Their continued use and visual unity serve as a model for adaptive re-use of historic buildings and as reminders of the benefits of architectural design.

The eight contributing structures in the amendment to the Hale Avenue Historic District maintain the historic association with the economic development of Osceola. Thus, due to both the direct associations of the contributing properties in the area to be added to the district with the original development that created this commercial area, the amendment to the Hale Avenue Historic District is eligible under Criterion A with local significance. It is being nominated under the MRA, Historic Resources of Osceola, Arkansas.

VERBAL BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION

The boundaries of two sections being amended to the Hale Avenue Historic District are described as follows:

The first section begins at 306 Hale Avenue. The boundary moves east towards the intersection of Walnut and Hale, then turns north and runs along the western line of Walnut Street, and ending at 109 North Walnut Street.

The second section begins at the southeastern point of the Hale Avenue and Poplar Street intersection. The boundary moves eastern along the southern line of Hale Avenue, and ends at 111 West Hale Avenue.

BOUNDARY JUSTIFICATION

These boundaries include all of the properties that historically have been associated with the district that retains their integrity.
