SUMMARY

The Dennis and Christine Garrison House in Horseshoe Mountain Community was constructed in 1951 and veneered by the stone mason Silas Owens, Sr. The home sits at 105 Garrison Road. The Garrison house is a one-story intersecting gable structure with Craftsman design influence.

Silas Owens craftsmanship is prevalent on the Garrison House. Building corners were all treated with his trademark quoining. The three-in, three-out cream brick pattern is evident around all original entrances to the home, including windows, doors, louvers, and porch openings. The herringbone pattern of the rock, also a trademark of Owens, is apparent on the exterior walls of the Garrison House.

ELABORATION

The Dennis and Christine Garrison House is a rectangular plan Craftsman-influenced bungalow sitting on a concrete foundation with an intersecting gable roof. The walls are finished in rough cut fieldstone and the roof is sheathed with asphalt shingles. Two porches with arched entries add a Mediterranean influence to the style of the home. The windows appear to be original to the building. The house is in a rural setting outside of the Horseshoe Mountain Community facing east toward Garrison Road. The Garrison House maintains much of its original design and construction. The only exterior changes are replacement stonework on the chimney (where an original stone is missing), and the enclosure of the porch on the south side of the house. Despite these changes the Dennis and Christine Garrison House still expresses the signature design elements of Owens, with the three-in, three-out cream brick around all entrances, quoins at the corners, and presence of the herringbone pattern justifying its nomination to the National Register of Historic Places.

Front/East Façade

The east elevation of the house is also the front face of the building. A large end gable dominates the front façade. To the immediate left of the gable end section of wall is another east facing wall set back several feet. A signature Silas Owens basket handle arch is the central feature of the front façade. The arch is trimmed in cream brick typical to openings on his buildings. The arch opens onto the front porch. The porch is covered by the front gable and is open on the east and south sides. The south opening to the porch is also an arch trimmed in cream brick, however, it is a much narrower entrance. Two concrete steps the width of the front arch lead to floor level. The front door is centered behind the arch opening, and it is also trimmed in cream brick set in the three-in, three-out pattern. There are two windows on the east façade. The first is beneath the gable, next to the covered porch. There is a pair of two-over-two wood frame double-hung windows within the opening. The second window is on the set back portion of the façade. The opening contains three separate windows. In the center are four fixed horizontally oriented panes of glass. A two-over-two wood frame double-hung window flanks each side. Cream brick laid in the three-in, three-out pattern border each of the window openings. The window sills consist of a row of cream bricks laid in the soldier formation. There is a vent in the peak of the gable which is also trimmed in cream brick.

Right/North Façade

The north elevation of the Garrison House features three windows. The windows are all two-over-two wood frame double-hung windows. The window openings are treated exactly as the openings on the east façade. The stonework on this façade of the home features Silas Owen's signature herringbone pattern.

Rear/West Façade

The west elevation of the Garrison House is the back side of the house. This façade is identical in form to the front façade, however, it does reflect the setback seen on the east side of the building. The west face has a window opening in place of the covered porch on the opposite side. All windows on this façade are two-over-two wood frame double-hung windows. They are trimmed consistent with windows on the other facades. There is a vent present in the gable end. The opening is trimmed in patterned cream brick.

Left/South Façade

The south façade of the home has a gable end roof. Directly beneath the roof gable is a small entry porch, which is also capped with a gabled roof. The porch was originally open on three sides with basket handle arches trimmed in cream brick. There are two concrete steps leading to the south facing arch. Currently the arches are in-filled in with wood paneling. A chimney, later added by Silas Owens, Jr., stands between the porch and southeast corner of the building. The chimney is veneered with stone, and the corners are trimmed in cream brick. There is a two-over-two wood frame window between the porch and southwest corner, and also between the chimney and southeast corner. The window openings on the south facade are treated similar to other window openings on the home. A vent is present in the peak of the gable. The vent opening is trimmed with cream brick in the three-in three-out pattern.

Integrity

The Dennis and Christine Garrison House, built in 1951, retains most of its original materials and still expresses the artistry of the masonry of Silas Owens. The original stonework is uninterrupted on the building and looks much as it did after completion (with the exception of the chimney added by Silas, Jr.). The house remains in a rural community and retains the feeling associated with it when constructed. This high level of integrity justifies nominating the Dennis and Christine Garrison House to the National Register of Historic Places.

SUMMARY

The Dennis and Christine Garrison House, located in the Horseshoe Mountain Community in Faulkner County, is being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places with local significance under Criterion C as the best example of a Silas Owens Craftsman home in the Horseshoe Mountain vicinity. This Craftsman style influenced house was built in 1951. Owens featured his signature design characteristics of the herringbone pattern in the rock, cream brick quoins at the corners, and cream brick around the windows and doors in the three-in, three-out pattern, on the Garrison Home. The Dennis and Christine Garrison House is being submitted under the multiple property listing, “A Storm Couldn’t Tear Them Down: The Mixed-Masonry Buildings of Silas Owens, Sr., 1938-1955.”

ELABORATION

Dennis Garrison married Christine Sims on August 31, 1947. The Garrisons had two children, Gale and Carl. They lived in a dimly lit wood frame house at 105 Garrison Road; however, they needed to upgrade their home. In 1951 Dennis and Christine Garrison commissioned master stonemason Silas Owens to build them a new home on the same lot in the Horseshoe Mountain community in Faulkner County. Gale recalls her father saying that a Silas Owens building was one of “sound construction.”

Silas Owens, Sr., and his sons Silas, Jr., and Bob helped with the construction. Dennis and Christine took part in the construction by helping to haul native stone to the site for Silas to cut and erect upon the building. The Garrison family moved into the home immediately after construction. Their daughter Gale Garrison was two years old at the time and recalls stories from her parents of the confusion she experienced going from the dimly lit house she was born in to the more brightly lit house that Owens built. Christine raised chickens, cows, and a large garden at the home. Dennis was long time employee of Horton’s Service Station in Conway and also held various positions in Faulkner County including Justice of the Peace and Tax Assessor. The Garrison family has continuously occupied the home since its construction in 1951. Some years after it was built, Silas Owens, Jr., added a chimney to the south end of the house. The addition was done with the same stone and using the same masonry techniques employed in the original structure.

ABSTRACT/SUMMARY COMMENTS:

The Dennis and Christine Garrison House is locally significant as an example of the distinctive mixed-masonry craftsmanship of Silas Owens, Sr. Built in 1951, this Craftsman-influenced house displays many features typical of Owens's work. The facades are rough-faced stone laid in a herringbone pattern, and the window and door surrounds and faux quoins are made of cream-colored brick. Today, the solidly-built residence is the best example of Owens's craftsmanship in the vicinity of Horseshoe Mountain. It reflects the architectural history of Faulkner County and retains integrity from its period of significance.
