Continuation SheetSection number 7 Page 1Description

During the Railroad Era (1870-1914) in White County a variety of vernacular houses were constructed. They were also built out of a variety of materials. Surviving examples from this period, however, are somewhat limited. The Lemay House is a good example of a one-story ell-shaped building that is of frame construction and clad with novelty siding. The gable roof is covered with composition shingles and the entire structure rests on brick piers. The open areas between the piers have been filled with an open grid of stretcher bricks.

Located at 305 S. Cypress Street, this building was constructed less than four blocks southeast of the Beebe commercial district. The Lemay House was constructed c. 1890 and is still in good condition. Its main, or west elevation is dominated by an ell-shaped porch that has a shed roof. The porch roof is supported by turned posts and adorned with decorative jig-sawn wooden brackets and details. Other architectural details found on the original structure include friezeboards and cornerboards. The gable end of the main elevation is fenestrated with a single centrally placed single-hung wood sash window. The upper sash exhibits multi-pane stained glass while the lower sash has a large single-pane of clear glass.

Other fenestration found on the original building, as well as the gable roof rear "T" addition, consists of either single or pair one-over-one double-hung wood sash windows. The upper portions of all gable ends on the building are relieved by louvered wooden vents. A buttressed single shoulder corbelled brick exterior end chimney is located on the southern gable end.

As previously mentioned, a large rear "T" addition is attached to the east elevation of the original structure. An open porch once stretched the entire southern elevation of the rear "T"; it has since been enclosed and covered with masonite siding. The south side of the enclosed porch is fenestrated with symmetrically placed one-over-one and two-over-two double-hung sash windows. An asymmetrically placed door accesses the east elevation of this room. A similarly sided and fenestrated addition is located on the north elevation of the rear "T". It too was once an open porch. Immediately east of this, however, is an open one-bay rear corner porch. The shed roof of this porch is supported by a single wooden post.

Significance

When this building was constructed, c. 1890, it was one of numerous ell-shaped buildings built during the Railroad Era (1870-1914). Though there are forty-one of these buildings extant in the county, few exhibit the amount of integrity found in the Lemay House. Because of this, the Lemay House is significant for its contribution to the study of vernacular architecture. For these reasons it is being nominated under Criterion C with local significance.

Reviewer's Comments

The boundaries of this property are presently located along building lines. A resource listed in the National Register should include all features of the property which contribute to its significance. In almost all cases this includes its historic setting. Page 77 of National Register Bulletin 16, Guidelines for Completing National Register of Historic Places Forms, states that "the boundaries of buildings should include the land surrounding the building, unless the lot occupied by the building contains no surrounding land as in the central business district of most cities."

Please revise the boundaries to include the property historically associated with the resource. If a portion of the original setting has lost its integrity, please explain.
