Continuation SheetSection number 7 Page 1Description

During the Railroad Era (1870-1914) in White County a variety of vernacular houses were constructed. They were also built out of a variety of materials. Surviving examples from this period, however, are somewhat limited. The Moody House is a good example of a one and one-half story, frame, gable entry building. Its roof is covered with metal, walls clad with weatherboard and the entire structure rests on a brick pier foundation.

Located at 104 Market Street, this building was constructed less than three blocks southwest of the Bald Knob railroad depot. It was constructed c. 1914, and is still in good condition. The Moody House is rectangular in shape with chamfered corners; the gable roof extends over these chamfers. The main elevation of the house faces south. It is dominated by a single-story gable roof porch that stretches across three-fourth's of the facade. Gable returns on the porch mirror ones found on the facade. The porch is supported by box columns. Facade fenestration consists of a paired one-over-one double-hung sash window found in the upper story. A similar window is located on the north elevation of the structure. Each chamfered corner is adorned with a single one-over-one double-hung sash window. A similar window is symmetrically placed on the west elevation of the structure.

The only exterior addition to the structure is located on the north elevation of the building. It has a shed roof and extends the length of the building between the chamfers. All three elevations of the addition are fenestrated with single two-over-two double-hung aluminum sash windows. The north elevation is also relieved by a single asymmetrically placed door.

Significance

When this building was constructed, c. 1914, it was one of several gable entry buildings built during the Railroad Era (1870-1914). Currently, however, it is one of only a handful of such structures which still survives intact in White County. Hence its eligibility under Criterion C with local significance.

A.P. Moody built the house for his father who was a Methodist evangelist. A.P. Moody first arrived in Bald Knob sometime between 1904 and 1910; by 1910 he, along with his three sons, were operating a sawmill that was to become the largest in the area. This sawmill used a dinky line to transport logs from the woods up to the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad line. His wife, Mary Wheaton, was the daughter of the man credited with growing the first strawberries in Judsonia. After his sawmill operation was shut down in the 1930's because of the lack of timber in the area Moody grew the first rice crop in the community.

Reviewer's Comments

The boundaries of this property are presently located along building lines. A resource listed in the National Register should include all features of the property which contribute to its significance. In almost all cases this includes its historic setting. Page 77 of National Register Bulletin 16, Guidelines for Completing National Register of Historic Places Forms, states that "the boundaries of buildings should include the land surrounding the building, unless the lot occupied by the building contains no surrounding land as in the central business district of most cities."

Please revise the boundaries to include the property historically associated with the resource. If a portion of the original setting has lost its integrity, please explain.
