Description

During the Boom and Bust Era (1914-1939) in White County a variety of vernacular houses were constructed. They were also built out of a variety of materials. Surviving examples from this period, however, are somewhat limited. The Milt Gooden House is a fine example of a one and one-half story double-pen house that is of frame construction and clad with board and batten siding. The gable roof is covered with composition shingles and the entire structure rests on stone piers.

This building is located on the west side of County Road 83, one-half mile south of County Road 205, and approximately four and one-half miles southeast of Bald Knob. Its main, or east elevation is dominated by a one-story symmetrically placed porch. The shed roof of the porch is supported by simple solid wooden columns. Two symmetrically arranged doors access the porch while symmetrically placed two-over-two aluminum sash windows fenestrate the main elevation. Similar windows are found along the ground floor of the house. The house was originally fenestrated with symmetrically placed four-over-four double-hung wood sash windows; these have all been replaced by aluminum sash windows except for the two upper story windows found on the gable ends of the original structure. A small brick chimney rises from the gable peak in the center of the original house. The only additions to the house are found on the west elevation of the structure. A single story rear ell is attached to the southwest corner of the house. Its wall material and windows are similar to the original house. A porch originally extended the full length of the addition's north elevation and has a shed roof supported by a simple wooden post. The eastern half of this porch has been enclosed. Once again, wall material and windows are patterned after the original building. A single asymmetrically placed door accesses the porch from the north elevation of the rear ell.

Significance

Milt Gooden was originally from Pineville, Kentucky where he worked in the local coal mines. He later moved to Dexter, Missouri and, after a short stay there, continued on to White County. Like most migrants of this time he travelled by mules and wagons. Gooden bought this forty acre farm and proceeded to raise not only the White County staples of cotton and strawberries, but cattle as well.

The real significance of this structure, however, lies in its architecture. When this building was constructed, c. 1921, it was one of numerous double-pen buildings built during the Boom and Bust Era (1914-1939). Although there are 101 of these structures extant in the county, few exhibit the level of integrity found in this house. Because of this, the Milt Gooden House is significant for its contribution to the study of vernacular architecture, and should be listed under Criterion C with local significance.

Reviewer's Comments

The boundaries of this property are presently located along building lines. A resource listed in the National Register should include all features of the property which contribute to its significance. In almost all cases this includes its historic setting. Page 77 of National Register Bulletin 16, Guidelines for Completing National Register of Historic Places Forms, states that "the boundaries of buildings should include the land surrounding the building, unless the lot occupied by the building contains no surrounding land as in the central business district of most cities."

Please revise the boundaries to include the property historically associated with the resource. If a portion of the original setting has lost its integrity, please explain.

Verbal Boundary Description:

Beginning at a point formed by the intersection of a line running along the western edge of County Road 83 with a perpendicular line running parallel to the northern elevation of the house and located approximately 50 feet to the north thereof, proceed westerly along said line for a distance of approximately 200 feet to a point formed by its intersection with a perpendicular line running parallel to the western elevation of the house; thence proceed southerly for a distance of approximately 200 feet along said line to a point formed by its intersection with a perpendicular line running parallel to the southern elevation of the building; thence proceed easterly along said line for a distance of approximately 200 feet to a point formed by its intersection with a perpendicular line running along the western edge of County Road 83; thence proceed northerly for a distance of approximately 200 feet along said line to the point of beginning.

Boundary Justification:

The original lot has been subdivided during the non-historic period, resulting in an indefinite current lot boundary; therefore, this boundary includes all the property historically associated with this resource that retains its integrity.
