7. Narrative Description:

Saline Island or Towhead, now known as Johnson Island, is located at the confluence of the Saline and the Ohio Rivers in eastern Hardin County, Illinois. Saline Island is a part of Union County, Kentucky. Once a distinct island, almost two miles in length, the island has silted into the Illinois shore. The island today is a combination of farmed and wooded areas.

The Ohio River at this point was quite constricted. The 1867-68 river map (see below) indicates that prior to the river dam system, the navigational channel was quite complicated in this stretch of river. The Cincinnati Tow Head was just upstream and bars narrowed the twisting navigational channel. Below the mouth of the Saline River, which empties from Gallatin County, Illinois, the Illinois shore becomes inaccessible due to high stone bluffs and a general rise in the ground level. In low water times it was the perfect stretch to halt river trade using military force. The main channel was forced to the Kentucky side of the river, which placed any passing boat within musket range of the Kentucky shore.

Saline or Johnson Island is primarily cultivated farmland today. Ninety percent of its 200 acres is tillable. A fringe of tree cover surrounds the fields save at the head where erosion has removed some of the land. The owner and the WRP are jointly working to replace the lost timber, which serves to protect the river bank. The island has silted into the Illinois shore to the extent that there is no flooded slough on that side. An access road to the island is located at its northwest corner. The island frequently floods well into early July and as a result the land is usually planted in soybeans or milo. The island has been farmed at least since the turn-of-the century. Maps from 1911 and 1919 show it under cultivation.

Criteria Considerations (Mark "X" in all the boxes that apply.)

8. Significance Statement:

Saline Island is located on the Lower Ohio River, seven miles below Shawneetown, Illinois, and just at the mouth of the Saline River in Illinois on the Ohio River. The southernmost tip or "head" of this island property is nominated as part of a Multiple Property Listing entitled "Caught in the Middle; The Civil War on the Lower Ohio River," within the context of "Federal and Confederate Military Operations On and Along the Lower Ohio River; The War on the River, 1861-65." The property is significant on the local level and meets National Register Criterion as a "Non-military Property With Civil War Associations" property. It meets Criterion A requirements established for that property type because this property was the scene of the initial Confederate crossing of the Ohio River in mid-August 1864 as part of a broader effort to shut down river military supply shipping. The seizure of a stranded steamboat at this point led to a small-scale invasion of Illinois and the seizure and ransoming of other steamboats over the next several days. The blockade effort resulted in a retributive raid through Union, Henderson, Crittenden and Livingston Counties by Federal land forces and a successful effort was made to drive Confederate forces out of that region.

Saline Island meets those registration requirements set forth in the associated historic context through its direct association with the American Civil War on the Lower Ohio River, the direct association of events at this site with broader military operations, and the retention of integrity aspects of setting, location, feeling and association in both its immediate setting and the surrounding landscape.

The Mouth of the Saline was the scene of several earlier wartime events. In early November 1861, the Kentucky "Secessionists" were reported to be crossing the Ohio River from Kentucky. On the Illinois side they killed loose cattle and removed them by skiff back to the other side. The entire 56th Illinois Infantry moved down to the river mouth to protect the Illinois property (Shawneetown Weekly Mercury, November 7, 1861).

The first armed incursion into Illinois at this point took place on October 30, 1862 when 60 "guerrillas" crossed the Ohio River at the Saline River's mouth. They proceeded to rob a Mr. Jones, presumably a storekeeper, of "a lot of boots and shoes." They moved downriver to Seller's Landing, then moved three miles inland, plundering along the way before they retraced their steps to Kentucky (Evansville Daily Journal, November 4, 1862).

The Mouth of the Saline was again the scene of a brief military occupation in mid-November 1862 when the 87th Illinois Infantry moved to Davis' Farm, the most eligible campsite on the Ohio River three miles above the Saline. Five companies were ordered to the point on November 15 to prepare the site for the whole regiment. The movement was made to "protect the Illinois border" from any incursions. At the end of the month the entire 700 man-force moved to the mouth of the river, the southernmost point of Gallatin County. There they scoured the shores for small boats for two days, but found only one boat for their efforts (Official Records Supplement, Series II, Vol. 25, p. 313, Special Orders, 87th Illinois Infantry, Record Group 94, Entry 112, PL17, Vol. 3, pp. 1, 3, National Archives).

Guerrillas lined the Kentucky shore above and below Shawneetown and fired at passing steamboats over a five day period, April 23-28, 1864 (Official Records Navies, Series I, Vol. 26, pp. 265, 272).

Confederate Col. Adam R. Johnson returned in force to Union County and by August 1864 was busily enforcing the Confederate military draft there. Beginning August 10, 1864, all passing steamboats were being fired into between Caseyville and the Curlew Coal Mines, opposite the mouth of the Saline River and this nominated point (Evansville Daily Journal, August 16, 1864).

Beginning August 13, 1864 the Confederates attacked and boarded the grounded steamer Clara Poe, which was stranded on the head of Saline Island. A landing party, first estimated to number between 700 and 1,500 men then reached the Saline River. Later that number was reduced to only 100 and nothing firm is known about their operations. A small handful of Confederates, possibly from this group, pillaged a store in Bay City in Pope County, Illinois, nearly two full counties below this point, on August 19, 1864. Between August 13 and 15 the Confederates captured and ransomed five steamboats and effectively blockaded the Ohio River if only for a matter of days. Low water prevented Federal gunboats from immediately reopening the river. The Federal military forces contented themselves with conducting a large-scale reprisal inland raid through the adjoining Kentucky counties and a concerted and finally successful effort drove organized Confederate forces out of Union County. Col. Johnson was wounded and disabled and the war shifted away from this stretch of the Ohio River (Evansville Daily Journal, August 15, 1864, Illinois State Journal, August 17, 1864).

10. Geographical Data

Verbal Boundary Description:

The southernmost segment of Tract I, the southernmost of three tracts on the island which are owned by Paul and Vicki Crenshaw. That tract is defined by a survey marker which is placed at the southeast lower point on the island. The nominated area includes the area located within an arch drawn across the southern tip of the island from that survey marker, which measures 100.

Verbal Boundary Justification:

This nomination includes only the southernmost tip of the Island, the point which was associated with the grounding of the first steamboat, and the point of the Confederate river crossing.

Washington, D. C. 20240

Dear Ms. Shull:

Enclosed is documentation for several Kentucky properties recommended by the Review Board to meet the National Register eligibility criteria at their May 13, 1998 meeting. These properties include:

- Dutch Barn, Historic Resources of Boyle CountyMPS
- Harrodsburg Pike Rural Historic District, Historic Resources of Boyle CountyMPS
- Hankla-Walker House, Historic Resources of Boyle County MPS
- Carson's Landing, Butler County
- Douglass School, Fayette County
- Dawson Springs Historic District (Boundary Increase) , Hopkins County
- Sulphur Well Historic District, Metcalfe County

Also approved at that meeting were the following six properties in various Kentucky counties. All are associated with the document Caught in the Middle: The Civil War Years on the Lower Ohio River MPS:

- Dr. David Polk Juett House, Ballard County
- Weston Bluffline Site, Crittenden County
- Star Fort, Livingston County
- Masonic Hall/Federal Commissary Building, Livingston County
- Tilghman-Woolfolk House, McCracken County
- Saline Island, Union County

As State Historic Preservation Officer, I conclude they meet the National Register eligibility criteria. We appreciate the consideration given by the Register to the historic significance of these Kentucky properties.

Sincerely,

David L. Morgan, Executive Director
Kentucky Heritage Council and
State Historic Preservation Officer
