DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Church Green District is located at the eastern approach to the Taunton business district. The center of the district is a triangular green which contains the First Parish Church as its focus, and the Vietnam Memorial fountain at the eastern apex. A small unnamed portion of street separates the church property from the Robert Treat Paine statue to the west. The Green itself is defined by three streets. On the northern boundary of the triangle is Church Green, a continuation of Dean Street. The street on the southern boundary is also Church Green, which was formerly known as Academy Street and later Spring Street. Summer Street is the base of the triangle on the west. The Green District comprises 20 structures and 2 commemoratives: the Vietnam Memorial Fountain and the Paine statue. Despite a variety of styles and ages, the area is a coherent unit of variations of Colonial and Classical styles grouped around an early Gothic Revival Church.

The First Parish Church in Taunton (1) (Unitarian-Universalist) stands in spacious landscaped grounds and faces Summer Street. It is surrounded by an 1877 stonewall, which is capped in granite, and punctuated by granite gate posts. The church is the fourth meeting house to stand on this site. An early example of the Gothic Revival style, it was built in 1829-30. The entire church is constructed of stone. This stone, according to local tradition, was acquired in nearby Assonet. The facade faces west, and is dominated by a square tower terminating in pinnacles at the corners. Connecting wooden battlements between each pinnacle were removed during the 1940's. The main entrance, in the center, is a heavy Gothic oak door above which is a large Gothic window. On each of the four sides of the belfry is a Gothic louvered opening. The church bell was transferred from the Third Meetinghouse. It was cast in 1804 by George Holbrook of Brookfield, who was in partnership with Paul Revere Jr. until 1813. The north and south elevations each contain four tall Gothic style windows with drip moulding above the arches. The arched beams of the interior span 55' to provide a wide, otherwise unsupported interior. In 1869, the Boston architectural firm of Hartwell and Swasey extended the main structure by 24 feet, added a new chancel to the east of the altar, and constructed a Gothic style chapel in matching stone at a right angle to the main structure. In 1965, another addition was built at the east to provide office and Sunday school space. Although the exterior walls are of matching stone, the wing was built in a modern style.

The Robert Treat Paine Statue (2), designed by the distinguished Massachusetts sculptor, Richard Edwin Brooks (1865-1919), was erected in 1904 on a circular grass mound in the center of a roughly triangular plot. It is a memorial to Robert Paine, a resident of Taunton from 1761-1780 and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. The statue depicts Paine standing facing west toward the commercial center of the city with a cloak over his shoulder, and a quill pen in his right hand. The base and pedestal of the statue are of light brown granite.

The Leonard Block (3), 107-111 Main Street, was built in 1870 by George Leonard, a prominent local businessman. The site had previously been occupied by the post office during the early 19th century. The 3½ story Victorian commercial building is in fair condition. Its exterior walls are of red brick. There are bracketed lintels over the second story windows and projecting round arched bracketed lintels over the third story windows. The mansard roof is of polychromatic slate tiles; it has a triangular pedimented dormer on the facade, round arched dormers on the elevations. A 2½ story projecting center bay with a pinnacle roof rises above the first story on the north elevation. The building is interestingly adapted to the curve of the street. The ground level is fully occupied by stores.

City Hall (4), 15 Summer Street, faces Church Green and is separated from the Leonard Block by a narrow street, Leonard Court. It was built in 1848 on the site of the homestead of the town's first minister, William Hook (1637-1644) and has served continuously as the center of town and city government. Earl E. Ryder, architect, designed the original building in the Gothic Revival style. In 1896, however, the Boston firm of Barker and Nourse enlarged and remodeled the structure. The exterior walls are rusticated stone reminiscent of H.H. Richardson's work, but the design was equally influenced by the new formality of the Renaissance Revival period. The three story structure has rounded pilasters and an elaborate dentiled cornice on the second and third story bays framing the main entry bay. The third story windows are arched. The second floor served as a high school until 1885. Opposite the building, on what is now Church Green, stood the town scales, watering trough, and Liberty Pole.

The following structures face north and are located on Church Green (south) and Dean Street (south side):

79 Church Green (5) was built c.1873 by James Rait, and purchased in 1896 by Col. Frederick Mason, owner of Mason Machine Works. Probably at this time, the house was enlarged and ornamented by the addition of such details as the delicate garland below the elaborate cornice, and the imposing one story, 3 bay, pilastered porch set on a rough stone foundation. The exterior walls of the 2½ story house are sheathed in white clapboards. The hip roof has inside end chimneys and a central triangularly pedimented dormer. A later owner, Dr. William Bennett, converted the side porch into an office, and added a two car garage.

72 Church Green (6) was built c.1902 by Col. Frederick Mason as a residence for his son, Maurice. The design was influenced by the work of H.H. Richardson and the early work of McKim, Mead and White. The house is sheathed in dark shingles, and has arches, moldings and gables typical of the shingle style. The gable roof contains two large hipped roof dormers facing north, one on the second story, one on the third. There is a small bay window in the east gable end and an indented window with curved shingles in the north gable end. The Fall River Diocese built an addition to the rear of the structure in the 1960's. The house is used as a residence for the Sisters, who operate a nearby nursing home.

The Old Colony Historical Society (7), 66 Church Green, was designed by the noted American architect Richard Upjohn. The structure was built in 1852 to house the Bristol Academy, founded in 1792. The two story, three bay wide brick building is square and symmetrical. It has a dentiled white wooden cornice. The windows throughout are narrow and round arched, with 6/6 fenestration. The entryway projects; its white wooden door is covered by a fanlight in a triangular pediment. A brick string course defines the first and second stories. The hip roof is surmounted by a pinnacled cupola. The building has been used since 1926 as headquarters, museum, and archives of the Old Colony Historical Society, founded in 1853.

60 Church Green (8) was built prior to 1850 by Charles Foster. The two-story white clapboarded house has a hip roof and inside end brick chimneys. The fenestration throughout is six over one framed by louvered shutters. The facade is five bays wide with a flat cornice and projecting enclosed flatroof porch, which was added in 1913 by Harry Carlow. A sun porch on the western elevation was also added in 1913. The house was acquired in 1969 by the Old Colony Historical Society and is currently used for storage.

57 Church Green (9) was constructed in 1836 by Abner Pitts. The three-story, white clapboarded house has a hip roof and two inside end chimneys. Fenestration is 6/1, and capped by projecting flat lintels. Late in the 19th century, the house was purchased by George Colby, who added an elaborate porch to the facade. This one story arcaded porch has pilasters, twisted balusters, a dentiled cornice, and a triangular pediment over the center arch. The porch is surmounted by a large bay with a round arched window on the facade, and a rectangular window on either side. The house was purchased in 1951 by Dr. Menahem Cooperstein, who used it as both home and office.

52 Church Green (10) was built c.1919 by Judge Richard Warner on the site of the Samuel Townsend House (1850). The 2½ story Georgian Revival house is sheathed in white clapboard, with dentiled cornice, and wide corner boards. The hip roof contains three triangular pedimented dormers on the facade and two on both the east and west elevations. Fenestration is 6/1, with projecting lintels. The five bay facade has a one bay center entry porch with simple pilasters supporting a rounded balustrade. The western elevation has a three bay deep pilastered porch, headed by an elaborate balustrade. The house was used as a Parsonage by the Pilgrim Congregational Church.

50 Church Green (11) is located on the corner of Dean Street. The house was built in 1829 by Barney Deane, and is perhaps the most distinguished house in the area. The house is square, symmetrical and a classic example of the late Georgian style. The two story, white clapboarded residence has 12/12 fenestration with louvered shutters, and a wide flat cornice. An elaborate Palladian style center entryway contrasts the simplicity of the structure itself. Dr. Arthur M. Crandall, a prominent physician, and direct descendant of Deane used the house as his residence and office until it was purchased by C. Stuart Robertson in 1943.

3 Dean Street (12) was built in 1899 by Alfred Williams. It is an excellent example of the American Georgian Revival style of the late 19th Century. The 2½ story clapboarded house is painted grey with white trim. The square and symmetrical structure sits on a heavy stone foundation, has a wide flat cornice, and wide corner pilasters. The hip roof contains an elaborate Palladian style dormer on the facade. One over one windows capped by wide flat lintels are on the three bay facade. The imposing central entry porch has Ionic columns supporting a rounded balustrade backed by a Palladian window. The west elevation shows an open one story porch headed by a simple balustrade.

7 Dean Street (13) was built in 1910 by Frank Simerdon as a two family residence. It is a simple and symmetrical 2½ story red brick structure with a parapet gable roof. The facade has an east end entry porch with semi-elliptical arched openings. The main section of the facade has windows grouped in threes, each six over six. The structure is now used as a single family house by a son of the original owner.

The following structures face south, with the exception of 37 Church Green which faces east, and 2 Dean Street which faces west.

The first house at 2 Dean Street (14) was designed by Richard Upjohn, and was built in 1854 by George Augustus Crocker, a prominent Taunton industrialist. The house was destroyed by fire in 1858. The present structure was built by Crocker and is presumed to be to Upjohns' original design. This large square and impressive 2½ story Victorian mansion sits on ample, well landscaped grounds on the corner of Dean and Chestnut Streets. It has heavy brick walls, a scalloped tile mansard roof with triangular pedimented indented dormers. The fenestration is 2/2 throughout, with louvered shutters. There is a semi-elliptical arched portecochere with balustrade. A similarly styled garage was added by J. Douglas Robertson, the owner since 1933.

37 Church Green (15) was built in 1825 by Anselm Bassett, attorney and Register of Probate. The house is located in a spacious setting on the western corner of Dean and Chestnut Streets. It is a clapboarded, gable roofed 2½ story symmetrical structure. The fenestration is 6/6. The 6 bay facade has a projecting entryway with triangular pediment, and 3 triangular pedimented dormers. There are 4 tall brick chimneys in the main house, one in the eastern wing. The porch, closed portico, and kitchen wing are of later origin. The house was owned and occupied until 1971 by the Bassett family, who were prominent in business and civic affairs.

31 Church Green (16), a modern apartment house, was constructed in 1970, on the site of the William Bradford residence, which has been destroyed by fire in 1968. The 3 story building was designed in a modified colonial style. It is of red brick, with parapet gables, and a giant 3 story front portico echoing that of the house to its east.

24 Church Green (17) was built as a residence in 1905 by Charles Newbury, a prominent industrialist. This imposing Colonial Revival structure is ample in size and well suited to its present use as an apartment house. The structure is a central block with 2 symmetrical wings. The 2½ story white clapboarded building has a dentiled cornice, a mansard roof, and gabled dormers with open returns. There are Ionic, fluted pilasters at each corner of the structure and a large triangular pedimented portico with Ionic, fluted columns. The doorway is framed by side lights and an overhead fan, and is covered by a small balustrade. The east elevation retains a one story pilastered porch, also with balustrade.

The Hubbard House (18), 14 Church Green, was built by Dr. Charles T. Hubbard c. 1844. The two-story, asymmetrical ridge-roofed house has 3 chimneys, bracketed gables and is sheathed in grey clapboards. The house has lost much of its' ornamentation. There is a covered end entryway on the facade. The original outbuildings, a barn and the doctors' office building, remain essentially as they were. The house is now owned by the Taunton Visiting Nurse Association, and houses its offices and clinics.

Church Green (19) is a utilitarian white clapboarded, one story structure. It was built during World War II as a hospitality center for servicemen. The building is in poor condition. It is owned by the Bristol County Radio and Furniture Company, and is used for storage.

One Church Green (20) was erected c. 1900 on the site of the Ingell House. It is a 2½ story white clapboarded Queen Anne style structure with tall gables. On the southern facade, there is a wide projecting two story bay containing a scroll pediment over the first story center windows. There are remodeled, symmetrical curved porches on the west elevation, and an open entry porch on the east elevation. The building originally served as the home of the Winthrop Club, a mens' club. It is now used as an office building.

70 Main Street (21) is a handsome commercial red brick block. It is a 3 story building with a rear wing and gable roof that was built c. 1840, probably by Marcus Morton, Governor of Massachusetts from 1840-1845. The simple six bay facade has flat stone lintels over each of the one over one light windows, and two triangular pedimented dormers. There are bridged chimneys on the end gables. The building was used to house shops on the lower floor, and residences above. The building is owned by the Bristol

County Radio and Furniture Company. The upper floors contain apartments; the ground floor is used for storage and window display.

The Vietnam Memorial Fountain (22), on Church Green, is located to the east of the First Parish Church at the apex of the triangle. It consists of a large flat circular basin into which water sprays at varying heights, direction, and size. Facing the fountain on a landscaped mound is a plaque bearing an inscription to those who died in Vietnam.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Taunton's Church Green is significant as a rich collection of 20 residential and commercial buildings of diverse architectural style and beauty. The structure's architectural histories span a period from 1829 to 1910, and represent a variety of high standard designs in the colonial and classic styles. Considered individually, nearly every structure is distinguished architecturally as an example of its type. Taken as a whole Church Green represents a well preserved avenue of buildings ranging from late colonial, early Gothic Revival and Italianate, through Victorian and Richardsonian, to shingle style and colonial revival.

The district is significant historically for the important religious, educational, and political developments which took place there.

In 1637 a group of Puritans, originally from the Southwest of England, travelled from Dorchester, Massachusetts to Tetticut, Massachusetts. Led by Elizabeth Pole, the Puritans purchased the town of Tetticut from Massasoit in 1638, and in 1640 they named it Taunton, after the English town of the same name. The common land, later called Meeting House Common and then Church Green, was laid out to the south and west of what is presently Dean Street, then an Indian Trail. Here the Puritans erected their first meeting-house, and established a common school some time prior to 1647. The first houses were built near this common, along Dean Street and along the Taunton River. The homes of both Nicholas Street, a teacher and minister from 1644-1665, and of Elizabeth Pole, the founder of the town and leader in civic and church affairs, stood on the Church Green. Captain William Pole and his military company of fifty-four mustered at the Meeting House in an emergency, and undoubtedly drilled on Church Green.

This Common land has been the center of government in Taunton from the time of original settlement to the present. The first two Meeting-Houses, the Town House (1812-1848) and the City Hall (1848 -) all stood or now stand within the boundaries of the original Common land. Continuously since c. 1647, a church, or churches, has also stood on Church Green.

The First Parish Church, gathered in 1637, was the first church established within the present boundaries of Bristol County, and the fifth established in the Old Plymouth Colony. Its religious history includes the heritage of Puritan founders, the Congregational Movement, the liberal religious movement of the late 18th and early 19th centuries as well as the Unitarian Movement of 1821. Originally known as the First Church of Christ, in 1791 it became the First Congregational Society; in 1821, the First Unitarian Society; and finally in 1937, the First Parish Church in Taunton.

Four Meeting Houses have stood within the present boundaries: the first constructed c. 1647, the second in 1730, the third in 1794 by Charles Bulfinch, and the present in 1829-30. All civil and political business in Taunton was conducted in the first two Meeting Houses until 1746. In 1671, the First Meeting House was chosen by Philip, the youngest son of Massasoit, and sachem of the Wampanoags, as the site for negotiations. Here, on April 12th, a treaty was signed with representatives of the Plymouth Colony, with Massachusetts Bay Commissioners serving as arbiters.

In 1828-29 the Church and the Town came to an agreement. The present property was deeded to the Church; the remainder was retained by the Town as Common Land.

Richard Edward Brooks, the designer of the Robert Treat Paine statue, is best known for his statue of Col. Thomas Cass in the Boston Public Garden. This statue received a gold medal at the Paris Exposition in 1900. Other of Brooks' works can be seen at the U.S. Capitol, the Connecticut State Capitol, and the Metropolitan Museum.

Robert Treat Paine himself was an associate prosecutor in the Boston Massacre Trial of 1770, a delegate to the Massachusetts Provincial Congress from 1773-1777, a delegate to the Continental Congress from 1774-1776, and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was also the first Mass. Attorney General from 1777-1780, and a Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court from 1790 until 1804. Paine was born in Boston in 1730, and came to Taunton in 1761. He was an outstanding leader in the community, and was long active in resistance to the Crown. He moved back to Boston in 1780, and lived there until his death in 1814.
