NATIONAL REGISTER CRITERIA STATEMENT (if applicable)

The Daniel French School possesses integrity of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling and associations. Constructed as a schoolhouse in 1847, and converted to a residence c1860, it reflects the growth of the town center in the mid-19th century. It is also important as a well-preserved vernacular Greek Revival style cottage with features related to both its schoolhouse and residential uses. During its first decade, it had strong associations with Daniel French, local educator, public servant and activist. It meets criteria A and C of the National Register of Historic Places.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE Describe important architectural features and evaluate in terms of other buildings within the community.

The Daniel French School is located on the west side of Common Street which runs north off central Main Street. Its lot is set off by a granite retaining wall and posts in a primarily mid-19th century neighborhood. It is a 1½ story, wood-frame Greek Revival style cottage facing gable end to the street. It is sheathed with clapboards and trimmed with paneled corner pilasters and a fascia/cornice. The gable end features two long windows at the first story and two standard windows in the attic. Both have thinly molded caps and 6/6 sash. The two first story windows may have replaced entries when the school was converted to residential use c1859-60. The last two bays of the five bay side elevation, which on the north include a window and an entry, also may have been added along with the gabled dormers.

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE Explain the role owners played in local or state history and how the building relates to the development of the community.

This house appears to have been built in 1847 by Daniel French for use as a schoolhouse. Daniel French was born in Berkley, MA, then part of Taunton, in 1814. He began teaching school before he was 21 and at age 23 was a teacher of mathematics at the Chauncey Hall School in Boston where his students included Nathaniel J. Bradlee, the architect, Charles Francis Adams, and John Lowell. French came to Waltham in 1842 and for two years was principal of the High School. In 1844 he established a private school that was originally located in the vestry of Trinitarian Congregation Society. In 1847, however, he bought land on Common Street and built the schoolhouse, which opened June 21, 1847, and was described in an 1859 account as "very commodious . . . with all the modern improvements" (Waltham Sentinel April 1, 1859).

In November 1858 French had a leg amputated and had to give up teaching. When he had recovered he began spending time in the law office of Josiah Rutter (see 54-56 Lyman Street form) and in 1859 was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar. He spent the rest of his career as a lawyer in a practice devoted mainly to probate and chancery work.

Daniel French was also active in public affairs. For many years he was Clerk of the Town of Waltham and in 1861 was the Representative to the General Court. He was an abolitionist before the Civil War and later an advocate of black women's rights; he was also a leader in the temperance movement.

After French stopped teaching, he sold the school in 1859 to William Clark, a grocer. The Clarks apparently lived in the house for some time, but by 1923 rented it. The occupants then were an assistant shipper, a machine operator, and a salesman.
