NATIONAL REGISTER CRITERIA STATEMENT (if applicable)

Congregation Agudas Achim Anshei Sfard Synagogue possesses integrity of location, design, setting, materials, and workmanship. As the oldest extant Jewish congregation in Newton, Massachusetts, it is significant under criterion A for its association with their early immigration to the city. It is also significant under criterion C as an intact example of a small scale early synagogue evocative of the size and means of a congregation in the early twentieth century.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE Describe important architectural features and evaluate in terms of other buildings within the community.

The Agudas Achim Synagogue is located on the east side of Adams Street in a modest densely developed residential neighborhood just south of Nonantum's commercial district. It is a small, one story brick structure of rectangular plan set on a high concrete foundation and trimmed with cast stone; the facade is faced with pressed red brick while the other elevations display a reddish-brown brick of lesser quality. The three bay facade is articulated by corner quoins and is centered around an entry with double-leaf paneled doors, headed by a semi-circular fan. Above the entry is an oculus containing the Star of David, and flanking it are two elongated round arched windows containing 6/6 sash. All of these elements are highlighted by alternating red and white voussoirs. A HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE Explain the role owners played in local or state history and how the building relates to the development of the community.

Jewish immigrants began settling in Newton, and particularly in Nonantum (along with the Irish, Italian and French Canadians) in the 1890s. However, there were no local congregations until a group known as Knesses Israel was incorporated in 1909. Knesses Israel worshiped in a house at 97 Dalby Street in Nonantum, but eventually disbanded, selling the Dalby Street house in 1914. The remaining members joined the congregation of Agudas Achim Anshei Sfard, which was chartered in October 1911, making Agudas Achim the oldest extant congregation in Newton.

Although small and far from wealthy, the congregants of Agudas Achim embarked on a campaign to build their own synagogue on Adams Street. Members gave "according to their means" and additional contributions came from outside the community - from Jacob Schiff of New York, and non-Jews such as the former Mayor of Newton, the Honorable John Wingate Weeks and local doctors Thomas Gallagher and Joseph Flanagan. The corner stone was laid in August 1912 at a ceremony attended by Mayor Hatfield and other local parapet containing the Star of David rises above the molded cornice. The side elevations are five bays long with the bays separated by shallow buttresses. The first bay on each side contains two 6/6 sash windows, one above the other; the three central bays contain round arched windows, a feature continued in the last bay of the north elevation, but replaced by an entry on the south.

officials as well as leading Boston area Rabbis and Cantors. This tiny early synagogue remained the only local Jewish house of worship until the incorporation of Temple Emanuel in 1935 (NC-B) and construction of that synagogue on Ward Street in Newton Centre in 1937.

There are no architectural plans and the architect and builder are unknown. Much of the work was done by the congregants themselves, some of whom were skilled artisans. The front steps were added in 1919, a gift from a member in gratitude for the safe return of his son from World War I. The interior was not completed until 1924 with the addition of the Holy Ark and bimah, which was designed by Samuel Katz, a Ukrainian cabinet maker from Chelsea, Massachusetts. Apart from the installation of plumbing, the building remains virtually unchanged.

The congregation of Agudas Achim remains small. It has never been able to retain a full-time rabbi, cantor or Hebrew teacher, but continues to function for Holidays. Until recently it also had no written record of its history. Several years ago, volunteers working under the direction of the Jackson Homestead, Newton's City Museum, began collecting oral histories from second generation members of the congregation. This effort culminated in an exhibit and a publication documenting the history of Agudas Achim. While there may be older congregations in the Greater Boston area, with very few exceptions, they no longer worship in their original synagogues. At Agudas Achim, children and grandchildren of the original members continue to worship in the synagogue and now support a revitalized congregation.
