DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Sutter-Meyer House at 6826 Chamberlain Court first betrays its age by its placement in relation to the street: not facing it but at right angles. It consists of a three-bay, one-and-a-half-story gable-roofed main block with a one-story brick wing to the rear and a later two-car brick garage attached to the northwest corner. The brick of the older portion is laid in common bond, while the garage has stretcher bond, but these differences are obscured by white paint, as are the radiating stretchers over the segmental-arched windows and the diamond-shaped ends of the tie rods.

Across the east front of the main block is a verandah, whose roof is supported by curved slat-like brackets and square posts on square pedestals. The floor of the verandah is now concrete. The front door has a transom, while the windows are two-over-two, double-hung. Twin chimneys pierce the rear slope of the main roof; they have elaborately corbelled tops. The rear wing has a narrow asbestos-shingled enclosed porch along its south side. Similar shingles can be seen on the gable end of the garage, which faces the street.

Original woodwork remains throughout the interior, including shaped lintels over doors and windows, and a fireplace in the south room. The staircase descends away from the front door and turns into the north room; it once had a second flight into the kitchen. Basement stairs descend from the back porch, which was enclosed in 1951. At that time a bathroom was installed at one end of the porch but at the level of and opening onto the stair landing. The kitchen has been modernized.

The lot on which the house now sits, the remnant of 8.33 acres, measures 88 feet by 150 feet. It has several old trees and many large shrubs. Although the next lot to the east and a larger stretch of land to the south (fronting Olive Street Road) are no longer in the same ownership, they have not yet been built on, thus preserving something of the original rural setting.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Sutter-Meyer House is significant as the oldest known residence in University City, Missouri.<sup>1</sup> It is also the last building to recall the settlement known as Sutter, Missouri. The land on which the Sutter-Meyer House rests was part of the farm of John Sutter, which was bounded by the present city streets of Sutter, Etzel, and Pennsylvania Avenues and Olive Street Road. Sutter (1815-1867) had come from Germany with his father, also John Sutter (1793-1859) and family in 1831.<sup>2</sup> He married Ursula Anselm in 1839 and in 1850 built "The Homestead" just off Sutter Avenue, which connected the house with Cook Avenue (now Page) to the north and the Olive Plank Road to the south. Sutter was a dairyman in partnership with Lucien Dutilhe Cabanne (1814-1875), a descendant of Pierre Laclède, the founder of St. Louis. Cabanne's farm was in what is now the West End of St. Louis, and the firm also had property in Madison County, Illinois. From their depot in downtown St. Louis they supplied some of the major hotels.<sup>3</sup>

John and Ursula Sutter had eleven children, of whom only five reached maturity. John (1840-1911), the eldest of these, became a contractor in stone quarrying and a road overseer; he was the grandfather of Orval C. Sutter (b. 1901), University City Alderman, and Dr. Richard A. Sutter (b. 1909), whose family has also been active in University City affairs. Ursula Sutter died in 1856 giving birth to the last of these children, and the following year John married Catherine Killian Hartnagel, a widow with two children. They had five more children, of whom the youngest, Otto (1863-1937), became a well-known surgeon and superintendant of the City Hospital from 1895 to 1899.<sup>4</sup> When John Sutter died in 1867 only John and William (b. 1846) had reached their majority. In 1871, as part of the settlement of his estate, John Sutter's executors subdivided the farm, giving the widow and each of the children a portion.<sup>5</sup> William Sutter received 8.33 acres bounded on the east by Ferguson Avenue, the north by Bartmer Avenue, and the south by Olive Street Road. As this was somewhat smaller than some of the other plots, he was also given a city lot on the south side of Cherokee Street just west of Compton.

William Sutter had been married on September 8, 1869, to Julia Broking, and it is possible that the present house was built at that time, before he had acquired separate title to the property. It is more likely, however, that it was built in 1873, when William and Julia mortgaged the property to his stepmother's trustees, making repayment the following year.<sup>7</sup> Then on July 5, 1875, they sold the whole tract, "Lot number 6 in the subdivision of John Sutter's estate" to Roman Meyer for $7,500.<sup>8</sup>

Based on stylistic attributes alone, the house could have been built at any time in the latter part of the nineteenth century. It has the front verandah of the French colonial tradition, raised in height to the proportions of the Greek Revival. Much of the woodwork inside is Greek Revival vernacular, but the square bracketed porch posts and the segmental-arched window openings belong to the vernacular of the Victorian era. Our best evidence that the house was built prior to 1875 is the tradition in the Meyer family that it was built by William Sutter.

Roman Meyer, born 1847,<sup>9</sup> was a German immigrant who was listed in city directories of the time as a gardener, that is, a truck farmer. Two weeks after he bought this land he married Maria Jocks.<sup>10</sup> She is said to have been married previously to another Meyer, and in Roman Meyer's will<sup>11</sup> he gave a bequest of five hundred dollars to his stepson Albert Meyer.<sup>11</sup> Roman and Maria had three children: Frederick Roman (d. 1963), Catherine (wife of Herman L. Lammering, d. 1941), and Louisa (wife of Joseph R. Ritter). After the death of his first wife, Roman Meyer married Barbara Ebner (b. 1861), by whom he had another son and three daughters. He died in 1913<sup>12</sup> leaving "my real estate at the North West corner of Olive Street and Ferguson Avenue" to his wife; she in turn bequeathed it to her four children in 1936. Son Edward E. Meyer, who had been born in the house in 1883, continued to reside there until his death in 1969.<sup>13</sup> The continuous ownership of the property by the Meyer family for nearly a century can be thanked for the preservation of the house.

The neighborhood around the Sutter-Meyer House has gradually evolved from rural to suburban over the past century. John Sutter's dairy business had been facilitated by the incorporation of the Central Plank Road (now Olive Street Road) in 1851,<sup>14</sup> and by the sixties a small community had grown up in the vicinity of Sutter's farm. By 1887 a Sutter post office was established,<sup>15</sup> and Sutter was still "a location on Olive Street Road in Central Township, seven miles from St. Louis City Hall" in 1911.<sup>16</sup> By 1904, however, Edward G. Lewis had launched his new suburb, University Heights, and the post office was moved closer to the developments he was promoting on Delmar Boulevard to the south. In 1906, the former Sutter lands as far north as Bartmer<sup>17</sup> were included in Lewis's newly incorporated municipality of University City.

By that time, houses fairly well dotted the Sutter Subdivision, but the Meyer family continued their gardening; even in his later years Edward Meyer kept an extensive flower garden between his house and Olive Street Road, one that was especially noted for its roses.<sup>18</sup> In 1951 most of the undeveloped part of Lot 6 of the Sutter Estate was replatted as Keating Subdivision;<sup>19</sup> Chamberlain Avenue was extended west to form a cul-de-sac, and the address of the old house changed from 6801 Olive Street Road (later 6805) to 6826 Chamberlain Court.

Edward Meyer's widow Bertha sold the old family property in 1970, and it changed hands eight times in the following eight years.<sup>28</sup> It is hoped that this nomination will help to assure the old house's preservation as a reminder of the early history of the area.
